Tuition fees

Tuition fees for this programme are published on the McTimoney College of Chiropractic website.

Fees may be reviewed annually, so students should refer to the current programme page for the latest tuition fee information.

Planning your costs

In addition to tuition fees, you should budget for the additional costs associated with studying and completing the programme. These may include travel and accommodation, required clothing and equipment, professional requirements, books and personal IT equipment.

The information below includes the main additional costs you should consider.

Disclosure and Barring Service

Students undertaking this programme are required to complete an Enhanced Disclosure and Barring Service (DBS) check as part of the programme requirements.

The College will provide information about when the check needs to be completed and how to arrange it.

If you already hold a valid DBS certificate at the required level, you may not need to complete a new check. The College will confirm whether your existing DBS meets the programme requirements.

If you have lived outside the UK, you may also be required to provide equivalent documentation from countries in which you have previously lived.

Having a previous conviction does not necessarily prevent you from studying chiropractic. Any relevant disclosures will be considered in accordance with the College processes.

Requirement	Cost
Enhanced DBS check	£57.66

Clothing and clinical equipment

Students are required to have appropriate clothing and equipment for practical and clinical elements of the programme.

A College tunic is required for practical teaching. Students will also need to purchase clinical diagnostic equipment before beginning their final clinical year.

Requirement	Cost
College tunic	From £30
Clinical diagnostic equipment	From £150

Additional requirements for the clinical year

Before beginning clinical practice, students are required to meet additional professional and practical requirements to support safe clinical practice and ensure appropriate insurance cover.

These requirements apply before students begin treating patients in the College's teaching clinics.

Requirement	Cost
Public liability insurance	From £85
First aid training	From £120

Resits and repeat study

Additional charges may apply where an assessment, clinical assessment or module needs to be repeated. These charges only apply where a student is required to repeat the relevant assessment or module.

Charge	Cost
Resit, assignment or written examination	£75
Resit, practical assessment	£100
Resit, clinical assessment	£250
Repeat 15-credit module	£400
Repeat 20-credit module	£530
Repeat 30-credit module	£800

Travel and accommodation

Students are responsible for arranging and paying for travel and accommodation associated with their studies.

The College does not provide on-site accommodation. Depending on your programme and study location, you may need to travel for practical teaching, summer schools or other programme requirements.

Where attendance at another location is required as part of the programme, information will be provided in advance to help you plan your travel and accommodation.

Students should also consider the cost of travelling to and from their usual study location throughout the programme.

Books and learning materials

Core and recommended books may be available through the College library, with electronic versions of available through online library resources.

Students may choose to purchase their own copies of textbooks for use during their studies and future professional practice, but this is not always necessary.

We recommend waiting until teaching begins before purchasing books unless you have been specifically advised to obtain a particular title.

Computer and technology requirements

Students will need regular access to a suitable laptop or computer and a reliable internet connection throughout their studies.

Course materials and online learning activities are accessed digitally, so students should ensure that their equipment is suitable for study.

The purchase, maintenance and internet costs associated with personal IT equipment are the responsibility of the student.

Other personal costs

Students should also consider normal personal expenses associated with studying, such as stationery, printing where required, meals while attending College and travel to and from their usual place of study.

These costs will vary depending on individual circumstances and are not included in tuition fees.
